MIT Dining
Retail Dining Strategic Planning
Survey Results
Survey Research Overview

- Objective: To have the right food in the right place at the right time to maximize campus retail sales.

- Method: Online survey sent to total campus population to profile current retail patterns and expenditures, awareness and usage of campus retail dining outlets, measuring attitudes, preferences and new concept possibilities.

- Total Responses: 2,258

- Response Rates: 14% Undergraduates, 12% Graduate and 11% Faculty/Staff

- Statistical Reliability: +/-3 @ 95% Confidence Level

- Survey Dates: Tuesday July 12 – Friday, July 22, 2022

- Data Weighting: Given the relatively close proportions of survey respondent segments to campus segments, we did not weight the data when reporting for total campus within the report.

- Breakfast NMP: On-Campus 0.6, Off-Campus 0.7
- Breakfast MP: On-Campus 1.5, Off-Campus 0.4

Note: Meal Plan holders answered the question as if using a meal swipe at a residential dining facility counted as purchasing at a retail outlet, even though the question clearly stated at a retail outlet, therefore we are reporting by meal plan vs. non-meal plan holders.

The following table provides an overview by topic and representative quote from the open-ended question #22 which asked respondents what the most important action item that MIT should take that would increase their use of on-campus retail food.

Table VII-15

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Topic</th>
<th>Representative Respondent Quote</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Cultural/Dietary</td>
<td>Have more Asian-related cuisine. I hate that there is nothing remotely satisfactory with the Asian options on campus. The majority of the population on campus is Asian (maybe I'm wrong but that is what I observe), but there is no good Asian food at all. There is no comfort food, no savory Asian food, and the rice isn't even good. I want something better.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pricing</td>
<td>Improve the price to value ratio. Use Chipotle as a baseline: students can walk 3 minutes off campus to get a 9 dollar bowl that lasts 1.5-2 meals. Why would they choose to stay on campus?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hours of Operation</td>
<td>I think the best way to increase the use of on-campus retail food for me would be to facilitate the process. Not restricting entry, etc. will make it more accessible. Also, keeping regular hours during the workweek rather than opening at odd or irregular hours is important. It helps to get back to a sense of predictability and regularity, despite ongoing new waves of the virus.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Marketing</td>
<td>I started at MIT during COVID (Fall 2020), so many on-campus retail options were closed. I wasn't aware when they re-opened, and I have not been incentivized to try them. Additionally, off-campus food options in Kendall Square are relatively close, though quick service options in/near Stata or Building 56 would be convenient (especially on the days I stay late or forget lunch).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Healthy</td>
<td>Incorporate healthy food options. Most of the food on campus, such as the dining halls, are already high in salts, sugars, or carbohydrates (i.e. pizza, burgers, pasta). I would like to have options that benefit my health, and take an interest in the nutritious well-being of the students at MIT.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
VII-15 Most Important Item MIT Could Do To Increase Your Use of Retail

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Topic</th>
<th>Representative Respondent Quote</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Online Ordering/Delivery</td>
<td>I would like a system like Wawa: where you can order on a screen and get a receipt for a meal that is made to order and ready to be picked up.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Quality &amp; Variety</td>
<td>Variety and quality. Stop serving exactly the same meals in the cafes (i.e. Koch and Forbes have the same food). This is boring and illogical. I realize that this simplifies things for Bon Appetite but it makes things really boring. The biggest loss over Covid was the Whitehead cafe which has good quality food at a reasonable price. Why can't you create that type of experience on campus?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Covid &amp; Sanitation</td>
<td>Servers mandated to wear masks so they don't breathe on the food they're serving since they interact with a wide crowd for people who are coming and going from a multitude of locations. Maintaining covered outside locations to eat.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Undergraduate</td>
<td>Raise the funds to underwrite the dining program for undergraduates in the residential houses. Thereby eliminating the unseemly choices that face students of limited means. When we speak of equity on this campus, we should look under our noses. The cost of food is separating poor and underserved undergraduates.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Graduate</td>
<td>Plan to make a graduate dining hall, it would become the social hub as a default in the evenings, around which you could put retail spots. I would consistently use a dining hall with a meal plan if it weren't in undergraduate dorms.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Staff</td>
<td>MIT is facing a staffing crisis, and the staff that are here are really struggling with the huge inflation rate of the past year. Regardless of our individual salaries, our food budgets are not buying nearly as much food as they used to. MIT could/should show appreciation for the hard work of its staff by giving everyone $10-20 (depending on how many days you work on campus) in TechCash each week that could be used for meals when we are on campus. That would help staff so much, and make them feel valued by the Institute.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Faculty</td>
<td>MIT has terrible food options, I am being very honest. For a faculty member in Building 10 there is nothing within walking distance that is affordable, comfortable, and quiet. The faculty dining in Stata was badly managed before Covid, I am not even sure if it reopened. The student center is unclean and unpleasant for faculty.</td>
